Why Designers Use It

This color is often used in design for spaces aiming to promote a calming atmosphere. The gentle greenish tint gives off a sense of renewal, making it popular in interior design, particularly for wellness centers, spas, and healthcare facilities. It's also seen in corporate and environmental branding, where a connection to nature and sustainability is emphasized. The shade is commonly used in paints for walls, furniture, and soft goods such as textiles. In the automotive and tech industries, it's a popular color choice for creating sleek, modern, yet relaxed designs. Its historical use in British and Australian standards shows it's been an enduring choice in color systems, offering a timeless appeal.
