Why Designers Use It:

This color is a favorite for soft, feminine designs, often used in branding for beauty products or fashion. It's seen in interior design to evoke relaxation, especially in bedroom or spa environments. Its light and neutral tones make it a great fit for spaces looking for a peaceful yet warm atmosphere.

Due to its calming and approachable nature, it's commonly used in designs related to wellness, beauty, or child-oriented products. The subtle pink hue appeals to those seeking a contemporary, understated aesthetic. Its wide use across industries, including fashion and cosmetics, makes it a staple for brands targeting softness, elegance, and sophistication.
